

THE DREADNAUGHT

THE SCOUT

The Planetary Collage sewing frame is the result of two years R & D to create an apparatus which would make the task of hand sewing and forwarding more simple and elegant. The features on the new frame provide a platform for sound, firm sewing and the mirror makes visible the process both inside the book sections and at the spine. The Anubis Clip [patent pending] creates a perfect tension for cord, tape, thong or braided sewing support and the page holder and fence enable the binder to sew a perfectly true book block without supplementary weights and squares.

The frame is made of the best possible materials and is designed for many lifetimes. Both sides, top and bottom, are surfaced in moisture proof laminate, easily cleaned, which will always keep the large base of the frame flat. The steel construction is very strong yet light, the whole machine weighing in at twenty pounds. The cross bar will hold thread, cord and can be easily rigged with an under counter light fixture for supplementary illumination [not provided]. The frame dismantles easily should you want to pack it up for a workshop or beach trip.

You will find that your book sewing can take on an air of experimentation and spontaneity due to the ease of rigging the frame or even stopping midway through a project. It is easily set up or taken down even with a project underway. Students have found new sewing patterns simply because the vertical supports are out of the way so all you are doing is concentrating on sewing.

The Planetary Collage Sewing Frame DREADNAUGHT model, measures 24 x16 at the base and is 17 inches high.
